CAMPUS

Faculty surveyed: The BG News has distributed a 10-question survey to all associate, assistant and full professors. Faculty receiving surveys are asked to return them to the News via campus mail immediately.

Survey questions include references to the state of the University, staffing, quality of education, the administration's leadership skills, Faculty Senate's ability to represent their colleagues and the Board of Trustees' level of awareness.

STATE

Sports betting: The Ohio Lottery was asked by 14 state legislators Wednesday to offer a game based on the results of professional sports events, but the lottery said odds against the idea were a million to one.

Rep. Ronald Mottl Sr., D-Parma, who sponsored the original constitutional amendment creating the state-run lottery in 1973, was joined by 13 other representatives in signing a letter sent to Ronald Nabakowski, executive director of the lottery.

"Judging by the results of the sports pool lottery game offered in Oregon, based on the results of professional football games, the Ohio Lottery should be able to significantly expand its revenue base by offering a sports pool game," Mottl told a news conference.

A sports wagering game could boost lottery revenues by $100 million annually. Profits from all lottery products go to schools. Mottl said the U.S. Department of Justice estimated up to $15 billion was being wagered annually on sports through office or tavern pools.

NATION

Co-ed frats: At their midwinter meeting, the Middlebury College Board of Trustees in Middlebury, Vt. decided the college's six fraternity houses must admit women as members by the end of this academic year or cease to exist.

By the end of March, each local house must state its intention to comply with the policy. If they will not or cannot comply with the Dec. 31 deadline they will cease to exist on campus at the end of this academic year and the houses will be included in the regular college room draw this spring.

The board also designated as "houses" those facilities currently occupied by fraternities, thereby removing official recognition of the gender-specific term "fraternities."

Leaders listen: Black student leaders from around the Southwest will gather at Texas A & M University in College Station, Texas Jan. 25-28 for the second annual Southwest Black Student Leadership Conference.

About 500 black students will meet to share experiences, enhance their leadership skills, improve self-awareness and establish links with corporate leaders. Keynote speakers include educator James Anderson, Essence magazine editor Susan Taylor and psychologist Na'im Akbar.

HISTORY

On this date: In 1978 Bowling Green and the nation continued digging out from one of the worst blizzards ever recorded.

The National Guard Army and other spots around town housed stranded and homeless people unable to survive the elements. Five Springfield men froze to death in their car north of Fostoria. And a frostbitten Bowling Green woman was found chopping down her front door so she could burn it to keep her family warm.

Bush urges troop cuts in Europe

by Terence Hunt
associated press writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush, propelled by the political upheaval in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, proposed a dramatic cut in U.S. and Soviet combat troops Wednesday night, saying in his first State of the Union address "the time is right to move forward."

With ambassadors from across the world in attendance, Bush told a joint session of Congress, "We are in a period of great transition, great hope, yet great uncertainty..."

"The events of the year just ended — the revolution of '89 — have been a chain reaction, change so striking that it marks the beginning of a new era in the world's affairs."

Bush also announced plans to withdraw all of the nearly 13,000 troops sent to Panama in an invasion to oust Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega "well before the end of February."

Hours before he delivered his address to Congress and a national television audience, Bush telephoned Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on Wednesday to advise him of his proposal to cut U.S. and Soviet forces in Central Europe to 195,000 on each side.

"We recognize that the Soviet military threat in

"So long as we remember the American idea — so long as we live up to the American ideal — the state of the union will remain sound and strong."

--George Bush, United States President

Bush

Europe is diminishing but we see little change in Soviet strategic modernization. ... But the time is right to move forward on a conventional arms-control agreement to move us to more appropriate levels of military forces in Europe," he said.

His troop offer was the surprise centerpiece of a speech in which Bush also proposed lofty goals for American schools and prodded lawmakers to approve his plans for a capital gains tax cut and bills dealing with clean air, child care, crime, drugs, education and other issues.

"It's time to act together," Bush said in a speech intended to help set an election-year agenda for a Democratic-run Congress.

He condemned racially motivated mail bombings, saying the nation "must confront and condemn racism, anti-semitism, bigotry and hate. ...

"And let me say that so long as we remember the American idea — so long as we live up to the American ideal — the state of the Union will remain sound and strong," he said.

Confronting a sensitive issue, Bush pointedly rejected a proposal by Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., to roll back a Social Security tax increase that took effect Jan. 1.

"The last thing we need to do is mess around with Social Security," Bush said.

Bush also expressed concern about the nation's health care, and directed Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan to lead a review of recommendation on the quality, cost and accessibility of the health care system.

"I am committed to bring the staggering costs of health care under control," Bush said.

The president said the challenge before America now is "to take this democratic system of ours, a system second to none, and make it better."

Burgers bring taste of West to Muscovites

MOSCOW (AP) With the familiar sign of the Golden Arches embellished by the Soviet hammer-and-sickle flag, McDonald's opened in Moscow Wednesday to offer Russians their first taste of Western consumerism, not to mention hamburgers.

Hundreds of people tried gingerly to get their fingers around their first American hamburger. They tried eating them one-handed. They picked them apart to examine the contents.

One young woman finally squashed her Big Mac in order to fit her lips around it.

"It tasted great!" said a 14-year-old boy, a sesame seed still stuck to his nose.

Black history celebrated

by Jill Novak
staff writer

Charles King, founder and president of the Urban Crisis Center in Atlanta, will speak on racism, Friday, beginning the series of events and activities scheduled for February — Black History Month.

The Black Student Union invited King to speak because "it is important for people to identify their racial attitudes" and address the problem, according to Charlene Queener, director of minority student activities.

He also presides on the Commission of Civil Disorders and was the chairman of the International Association of Human Rights Agencies and will speak at 7 p.m. in Koberger Hall.

To celebrate the African American Theater, the Office of Minority Affairs will present a dinner theater production of "Harlem Renaissance" Feb. 17 in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom.

The program will include poetry, songs, short stories and include music by Duke Ellington and Fats Waller and also traditional spirituals, Queener said.

Another program commemorating the music of Ellington, as well as Count Basie will be presented by the Jazz Arts Group of Columbus Feb. 6 at 8 p.m. in Koberger Hall.

Asa Hilliard, professor of education at Georgia State University, will discuss "Free Your Mind, Return to the Source: African Origins" on Feb. 16 at 7 p.m. in 1007 Business Administration Building.

Queener said Hilliard was asked to speak because "people should know their roots."

Hilliard is a founding member of the Association for the Study of Classical African Civilization and now vice president of the organization. He also has been a prominent expert witness in litigation on test

College minority enrollment down

by Dennis Kelly
USA Today-CIN

College enrollments of low-income and middle-income blacks and Hispanics have dropped dramatically since the mid-1970s, which is "an educational failure rate of intolerable magnitude," according to a study released last week.

The eighth annual report on minority college participation by the American Council on Education revealed enrollment of dependent 18-to-24-year-olds since 1976, regardless of family income, has risen 3.6 percent for whites while dropping 12 percent for blacks and 8 percent for Hispanics.

But the trend, a reversal from the gains made in the early 1970s, paints an even bleaker picture when broken down by income groups. College enrollment rates since 1976 have:

□ Dropped from 53 percent to 36 percent for middle-income blacks, and from 53 to 46 percent for Hispanics.

□ Dwindled from 40 to 30 percent for low-income blacks, and from 50 to 35 percent for low-income Hispanics.

Another concern is the disproportionately low number of minorities earning degrees. Blacks made up 9.2 percent of the undergraduate population in 1987, but earned just 5.7 percent of bachelor's degrees; Hispanics were 5.3 percent of the population, but collected only 2.7 percent of the degrees.

"Since the mid-1970s, the college participation rate of African-Americans

Barry must face responsibilities

Nothing is ever black or white. Including the case of Mayor Marion Barry of Washington.

Recently arrested by federal agents during a cocaine bust, the mayor now claims he is the victim of a racist plot by white government officials.

The illegal use of drugs has been determined to cause many of society's great ills, such as crime, murder and AIDS. And for his actions, Barry is using another of America's problems as an excuse — discrimination.

When faced with accusations that could ruin one's life, it is easy to use any excuse available to weasel out of the charges.

But we cannot let Barry get away with that.

If the mayor is guilty of using drugs, he deserves to be punished for his actions and no judge or jury should let his lame excuses get in the way.

Such an effort is a cheap political trick used to get the sympathy of the public and the media to support him, which would force the charges to be dropped, or at least reduced.

The actions of the law enforcement agents cannot be called racist because the charges are directed toward his habits, not his ethnicity. No one is blaming him for being black, they are blaming him for doing wrong.

Granted, countless others in the nation's capital are guilty of committing both smaller and larger drug-related offenses, but they are not responsible for government contracts, personnel appointments and taxpayers money.

It truly is a shame that Barry had to be caught up in a drug raid because this country needs more black leaders. An all-white, upper-class middle-aged male government does not effectively represent the people.

Barry appeared to be a perfect representative of the people and by many accounts was succeeding.

In crying racism, Barry has failed miserably for he has weakened the legitimacy of any future sincere claims of discrimination by political officials.

The boy who cries wolf too many times soon learns no one listens to him. And such an utterance from Barry may keep the public from believing someone else who actually is a victim.

Discrimination in our society must be fought without question whenever it is discovered, but hollow claims and the resulting false battles that ensue are counterproductive.

Barry's motives must be recognized for what they are — deceitful and manipulative — and those truly supporting the fight against racism should not let themselves be exploited for the mayor's personal gain.

Resolving the resolutions

Well, it's the first day of February and you know what that means. Those resolutions we made a month ago are probably just wishful-thinking wraiths. I call mine the ghost of New Year's Day past and it's haunting me.

I told myself this would be the year I got ORGANIZED. Why, I can remember making that resolution as if it were only yesterday, yesterday, yester...

"So, Jimmy, are you going to resolve to better yourself in one way or another?"

Sure! This year I'm going to get organized.

"Yeah, right."

At first things went pretty well. I would make a list of goals for the next day — realistic goals too.

I've made "Think & Do" lists before and I always included some things I can't help but accomplish. Freebies, like waking up, eating, asking why they took the Liars Club off the air, etc.

However, this January my goals were more challenging, such as knowing how much money I have in the bank. (Of course, a single digit account makes things easier). And other simplicities: paying my bills on time, reading, writing, eating, sleeping. Reaching my full potential would be the offspring of planning and action.

And dude, I was grooving. The lists I made covered in dark corners before finally being cut down and metamorphosing into accomplishments. I painted my parents' kitchen, I painted my kitchen, I organized receipts, bills, balanced my checkbook and watched television.

Then one dark and stormy night, IT happened. Classes started.

Foolishly eager to learn, I went to all my classes early, picked up the syllabi, listened to the pros give their spiel and was out in about 20 minutes. Not too bad, yet.

Within a week I was late to three classes, missed one the second week and two more the following week. However, I have been writing down the classes I miss. So, at least I can remember the things I forgot to learn.

Despite missing out on some good clean lecturing, I made a beeline for the "Terrorist Bookstore" — where the textbook industry holds you hostage.

I made my way around the store (in a very organized fashion) choosing texts; trying to decide what books I needed to buy and which would be regurgitated in class. About 10 of the books I needed weren't in stock, but I'll get them tomorrow....

Yet, this resolution called for more than just having most of my books before mid-term. I needed notebooks with pockets, multi-colored pens, little-sticky notes, binders, filler paper, calendars and best of all — a day-to-day planner!

Oh, man I was set. I started filling the pages up with assignments, appointments, deadlines, personal goals and more. If there was anything that might affect my life, I knew when I should do it or when it would do me.

Now, however, I have no clue where that book is and no clue in general. I forgot an appointment Monday, had to tie a string around my finger to be late for one Wednesday and my class notes are randomly scattered in three different notebooks and on a paper towel.

I don't know if I paid my Visa bill, the landlord tells me I owe her $50 for a late rent check, BUT I registered for fall classes!!

Unfortunately, I realized I've taken about half a dozen of the wrong classes in the past two years and I may be here just a bit longer than anticipated.

Oh, they were great classes, but they don't mean diddly in regards to my major or my minor.

Who cares anyway?! All life is a game. What is there but chance? Nothing really matters. Why am I here? What is good is a degree? We're all gonna die anyway. The universe is chaos. I just want to be me!

OK. Deep breaths. I like me. Count to ten. The real world is worse than college.

I've regrouped. I'm not giving up on being aware of what's going on in my life and trying to get it done on time. Absolutes are always trouble. We can only do our best and when we stumble pick ourselves up and try again.

In the immortal words of Dr. Gene Scott, "Keep it rolling."

Students should come first, then faculty

To the Editor:

I have been watching the events of the past week with increasing dismay. First, Paul Olscamp retreats behind a wall of presidential privilege when the policies and priorities of this Administration are questioned. Next, Kevin Coughlin comes out with a predictable statement of blind support for Olscamp. Finally, today it was alleged that, if the Faculty Senate Executive Board would not resign, Olscamp will have them removed from office by the Board of Trustees. Throughout this morass of poor wording, accusations of unfair tactics and political patronage, the only voice of reason seems to come from Ricardo Frasier, who called for Olscamp to answer the charges against him, with out allying himself with either faction.

A question comes to mind here. Who is in charge here, and which group is the University set up to benefit? Jan. 23 events show clearly that Paul Olscamp is in nominal control. Sadly his vanity and desire for complete control, cause him to run this University as his personal fiefdom, allowing faculty self-governance only when it does not threaten his position as head hancha. It is my understanding that the University exists primarily for the benefits of the students. Faculty Senate recognizes this; when the proposal to shift the day-break toward Columbus Day was made by Faculty Senate, it was dropped from consideration when USG showed that students were opposed. This is more input than Paul Olscamp has ever bothered to get on parking, campus smoking, or the information mansion scandal. He may have spoken to the U.S. president behind closed doors, but this is not the proper venue for discussions of policy with high levels of relevance to the student body.

While students usually do "come first," faculty should "come next." While they are here primarily (in most cases) to teach the students, they are also supposed to carry on research in their fields and advance academic knowledge. Administration and its needs in its role of providing a proper environment for students and faculty should come last. What we are seeing here is an administration that, for the vanity of its leaders, ignores a resolution that raises fair questions of accountability and responsibility, places its image and needs first, and forces the resignation of a Faculty Senate Executive committee that has a record of having concern for students.

This is not fair. This is not right. I call upon all students to do the right thing. Do whatever you can to pressure Paul Olscamp to explain himself. Go to his open forums and ask him to justify his insensitivity to faculty and failure to attend Faculty Senate, write him and press for a rationale for the unprecedented and unconscionable power play on the Faculty Senate. Show him that not all students have Kevin Coughlin's blind faith in his policies. If we cannot get him to respond, maybe we should go to the Board of Trustees and force him to resign.

Cartoon shows racial insensitivity

To the Editor:

Who is K.L. Funk (the Political Rapper) and what is his purpose? I am referring to the Editorial Cartoon in the Tuesday, Jan. 30 paper. The cartoon illustrated a black man who was rapping about the recent woes of Washington's mayor Marion Berry. It concluded with the phrase "Yo! Where's Jesse when you need him?"

I missed the point! What was the cartoonist trying to prove and what was the point? What I did see was another attack on the image of African Americans. It is okay to poke fun at certain political issues, but this cartoon crossed the line of having fun. It only serves to perpetuate the stereotype African American, particularly African American males.

Mr. or Ms. Cartoonist, what were you trying to prove by drawing an African American with a cap, sunglasses, earring, long hair, big nose and lips? Is this your image of African Americans, is this a person you know? I doubt it!

How many positive images do we witness in the BG News dealing with the positive nature of African Americans? Can't think of many, can you? But, if there is negative news, it is paraded in the paper. Writing stories about events sponsored by Multicultural Affairs is not enough. There are African American students involved in other facets of the University. Do not misinterpret what I am saying, this is not an attack on the BG News, but it is an attack on the biased coverage. The purpose for printing this cartoon should have been questioned. You would not have a cartoon poking fun at other sensitive social issues such as date rape, gay rights, women's issues or AIDS. Why is it okay to offend African Americans?

Get the hint, I find this type of coverage as insensitive, offensive and stereotypical. If you don't understand why it is, I will invite you to learn the reason why, by attending a seminar on Feb. 2. Dr. Charles King will be featured in Kobacker Hall: his topic, racial sensitivity.

Until we all understand that racism and the perpetuation of racial myths are people problems instead of an African American, Native American, Hispanic Asian or a White problem it will continue to exist. Mr. or Ms. Cartoonist I challenge you to ask 10 people you do not know, who are African American, what they thought about the cartoon. Once you do that, you will be on the road to gaining a true understanding of what I have said. If you have any questions, contact me and I'll enlighten you.

AAUP avoids events involving Senate

To the Editor:

Putting aside the details that comprise the recent Faculty Senate/University President brouhaha, I want to focus on the published announcements of the fear which is said to be permeating the faculty, constraining them from making public their opinions regarding this latest controversy.

"For every person on this campus who is willing to be publicly identified in support of (former) Faculty Senate members, there are at least five people who are afraid to be quoted," says Professor Bruce Edwards. More like ten asserts another colleague. Whatever side members of the campus community take on this and any other local dispute, surely all would agree that the presence of fear — anxiety brought on by the possibility of adverse consequences of one's actions or words — is abhorrent, and a telling barometer of the social climate here at BGSU. President Olscamp himself, were he convinced of the accuracy of the fear report, must be, to say the very least, distressed...and I must here include Vice President Clark and the Board of Trustees. Collegiality, free exchange of ideas, pride in one's place of work...all and more suffer or are obliterated by the cancer of fear. And please note this is no mere hyperbole. Fear of being discriminated against by administrators, by tenure and promotion committees, because one voiced a particular set of feelings or convictions is, indeed, akin to a venom that begins unobtrusively enough but may eventually totally engulf one's professional life.

To date, the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) has felt it inappropriate to enter the current fray. But with the return of reports of fear of reprisal for the exercise of free speech, the local chapter is indeed much involved and concerned. Curtailment of academic freedom cannot be permitted without shrill dissent; and when that curtailment is of the insidious type, AAUP is doubly aroused because the causes, the sources, are not always available for dialogue and remedy. Our colleagues obviously do not agree with FDR: the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—though that must be eradicated — but what in our midst is its real basis.

The chapter urges both those who feel afflicted and all possible afflictors seriously to consider the harm being done to the entire campus community.

Trevor J. Phillips, President,
BGSU Chapter, AAUP (EDFI)

Old registration returns

Summer semester sign-up forms available starting Monday

by Emily Schroeder
staff writer

Registration for summer classes begins next week, but students cannot use the on-line registration system used for fall and spring course selection.

Judy Donald, director of Summer Workshops through the Office of Continuing Education, said paper registration must be used because the STAR system has not been programmed for summer scheduling yet.

Registration forms are provided in the course booklets which will be available in the registrar's office beginning Monday. The deadline for undergraduate registration is April 6.

In-person registration is scheduled for April 23 to May 11 in the registrar's office.

"For students who meet the April 6 deadline, the first mailing of fee statements and schedules will be sent on April 16," Donald said.

The deadline for graduate student mail-in registration is May 3.

Summer courses are offered in five, eight, and 10-week terms, beginning May 14 and lasting until Aug. 10.

"The number and selection of courses offered during the summer sessions are determined solely by each department," Donald said.

"Tuition for summer school is determined on a per hour basis," she said.

Fees are listed in the back of the summer scheduling booklets.

and Hispanics has been a picture not of progress, but of major regression, the report states.

Among reasons suggested at a briefing were the shift from outright grants to student loans, higher entrance standards and, anecdotally, a reported increase in middle-to-higher-income minorities choosing the military as a career option.

Blandina Ramirez, director of the council's office of minority concerns, said the problem demands comprehensive efforts to increase minority participation by both universities and federal and state governments.

"The successful efforts being carried out on college campuses are spotty and short-lived, and they are of recent vintage," he said.

Deborah Carter, who wrote the report with Reginald Wilson, said "it doesn't say the efforts aren't working. It says not enough effort has been made."

Blandina Ramirez, director of the council's office of minority concerns, said the problem demands comprehensive efforts to increase minority participation by both universities and federal and state governments.

"The successful efforts being carried out on college campuses are spotty and short-lived, and they are of recent vintage," he said.

Deborah Carter, who wrote the report with Reginald Wilson, said "it doesn't say the efforts aren't working. It says not enough effort has been made."

Educator gives speech

Soviet says Gorbachev has helped, hurt U.S.S.R.

by Brenda VanSise

Mikhail Gorbachev did much to improve the Soviet Union's foreign policy, but he has done far less as far as domestic policy is concerned, according to an Soviet educator on exchange at the University.

Irine Stakhanova, currently serving as a curriculum consultant for the Russian studies department, arrived in Bowling Green this semester on the exchange of curriculum consultants program through the American Council of Teachers in Russia.

Stakhanova said the Russian educational system has changed the most in the subject of history.

"Through perestroika, we realized that the Communist history textbooks were not true," she said, though an interpreter.

"The high school history textbooks which had been used for years were withdrawn and the students were no longer tested over the material," Stakhanova said.

She also spoke on the subject of discrimination, explaining that generally, there is little female discrimination in the Soviet Union.

"It all depends on the character of the woman — you see, if a woman is a hard worker, she is respected," she said.

Stakhanova believes she was adequately prepared for her visit to the United States.

"Recently, we have seen a lot of American broadcasts on Soviet television," she said. "The reforms have brought us Phil Donahue and before I left I saw five films called 'American Provinces.'"

She admitted she was still surprised when she arrived in the United States, though.

"The major differences are in the level of culture and working conditions in the American universities — I was impressed by the library and computer availability here," she said.

She was also surprised by the people in the United States because "they are very friendly and polite, and they always seem to be in a good mood," she said.

McDonald's

The restaurant "is a lot different from a stolovaya," he continued, referring to the run-down, dirty cafeterias that slop out dishes like rice and fat or boiled sausage in the Soviet Union's closest approximation to fast food.

The restaurant was 14 years in the making, but finally, thanks to the reforms of President Mikhail Gorbachev, people got a first-hand look at such alien concepts as efficiency and fast, friendly service.

Unlike nearly all other Western firms opening up in Moscow, McDonald's is selling for rubles, which are worthless outside the Soviet Union and won't even buy much in the shortage-plagued country. It expects to serve 15,000 people a day.

Hundreds of people lined up for the long-awaited grand opening, reaching eagerly for McDonald's flags and pins handed out by the hamburger chain's brigade of workers. An hour before opening, the McDonald's crew handed out advertising leaflets at the Pushkin Square metro stop a few yards away.

Normally dour-faced citizens broke into grins, catching the infectious cheerful mood from youthful Soviet staffers hired for their ability to smile and work hard.

see, she said. Customers can even see how a friend's hair would look by bringing them along.

The computer begins by using a video camera to capture a customer's image on screen. The proposed hairstyle is then matched to the face, and a color photo of the new hairstyle is produced.

Insana will not cut customers' hair, but the photograph can be taken to a beauty salon or barber to show them how to style it, she said.

freshman who consulted Insana, seemed impressed with the concept.

"Once I got there I was a little nervous about what they were going to do," Onderak said, "but it really turned out to be nothing at all."

The process just consists of sitting in front of a video camera for a couple of minutes and watching the rest, she said.

"It reminds me of an etch-a-sketch," she said at one point, while a computer cursor rendered her bald by skipping over her hair.

Money, as well as hassle, could be saved with this system, she said.

"If you want to get a spiral perm it costs $55, but if you don't like it and want it taken out, it costs an extra $20 or so," Onderak said. "It would save you money in the long run."

The technique is new to Northwest Ohio, but this kind of computer imaging has caught on quickly in other parts of the country, according to Insana's husband Joe, a partner in the company.

"In California, it's all over the place," Mr. Insana said. For many people there, computer imaging a hairstyle is a standard step in the haircutting procedure, he said.

Yet business has been slow starting off for the company. The couple agreed that they jumped to buy the system a little soon, and now they cannot afford to advertise the service.

"We don't have enough money to tell people about it," Mr. Insana said. "We're kind of passing it by word of mouth."

"We've struggled for the first few months," Mrs. Insana added.

At this time, Mrs. Insana is running Design by Your Image out of her home, but she hopes to work in conjunction with a beauty salon or open her own place soon.

But Onderak said the computer imaging may sell itself.

"I always look through magazines and think 'I wonder what I'd look like with that hairstyle?' Now you can know," she said.

Bowling Green's Joe Moore slams one home against Akron Wednesday night in Anderson Arena. Moore scored 11 points in BG's 77-71 victory.

Falcons outlast Akron, 77-71

Venable scores 25 points to key victory

by Mark Huntebrinker
sports writer

There are players in college basketball who can light up the scoreboard, then there are those who execute the intangible parts of the game — those qualities that aren't found by merely glancing at statistics.

Wednesday night, Bowling Green's Clinton Venable managed to combine the aforementioned attributes and use them to aid in extinguishing the pesty Akron Zips, 77-71, in front of 3,075 in Anderson Arena.

The 5-11 guard lit up the visitors for 25 points, while playing a big role in holding guard Mark Alberts, who ended with 18 points on six three-point shots, scoreless the final 14:33 of the game.

In the first half it was not only Venable's 13 points that kept the Falcons rolling, but his success in getting the ball to an open teammate.

Although the junior playmaker entered the game as the Falcons' leading scorer (17.2 points per game), scoring isn't his only priority.

"I don't think I have to score a lot to have a good game," Venable said. "I can produce by passing and playing good defense because we have other guys that can score."

UA head coach Coleman Crawford said he realized coming in, the key to stopping BG is to contain Venable.

"The difference in the game was our inability to play good team defense early in the game," the first-year head coach said. "We knew coming in Venable had to be contained, and when we didn't he opened up so much for the other guys on the team."

Those other guys included

Moore Venable

Steve Watson (13 points), Joe Moore and Billy Johnson — who each chipped in with 11. Sophomore forward Tom Hall made good use of his nine points, scoring a majority of those in key spots.

It was Venable, Hall and Moore who played key roles down the stretch. With the score knotted at 49 with 14:33 left, the trio combined to score the rest of the BG points — until Billy Johnson ended the game with a fast-break slam.

The key run in the stretch occurred with the Falcons' grasping to a 63-58 lead at the 7:05 mark. Venable proceeded to hit a three-point bomb, followed by a Joe Moore dunk. The points gave the Falcons a 68-58 cushion with 5:51 left.

The Zips cut the lead to four on a John Wilczynski jumper with 23 seconds to go, and had opportunities following a Kirk White-man missed free throw. But UA couldn't capitalize and Johnson put an exclamation point on the non-conference victory with the dunk at the buzzer.

BG head coach Jim Larranaga said he was impressed with UA's effort.

"I think they are a very good team. I have a lot of respect for Coleman (head coach Crawford)," he said. "They are well disciplined and utilize the outside and inside game effectively."

The Zips were propelled by the three-point shooting of Anthony Buford, who had 25 points and Alberts. Buford was five of eight from three-point range, while Alberts converted on six of his 10 attempts from long distance.

The key to Falcons' success down the stretch was the effectiveness of the triangle-and-three defense — led by Ven-able's pressure of Alberts — to contain the duo.

The triumph raised the Falcons' overall record to 13-6.

UA, which dropped to 12-7 overall, was looking to make BG its fourth Mid-American Conference victim. Previously, the Zips had defeated the likes of Western Michigan, Ohio University and Central Michigan.

With their prior success in the MAC, the Zips were confident coming in.

"We came into this game thinking we could win, like we always do," Alberts said. "This win would have been a big one for us because Bowling Green is a good team."

COLUMBUS (AP) — With a new month, Ohio State coach Randy Ayers hopes, will come new results.

COLUMBUS (AP) — With a new month, Ohio State coach Randy Ayers hopes, will come new results.

Enmeshed in a four-game losing streak, the Buckeyes open a four-game home stand when they host Northwestern tonight at St. John Arena.

Enmeshed in a four-game losing streak, the Buckeyes open a four-game home stand when they host Northwestern tonight at St. John Arena.

Ohio State (8-9 overall and 3-5 in the Big Ten) could keep alive flickering hopes of a postseason tournament berth if it makes a 180-degree turn over the next two weeks. After the Wildcats (8-9 and 1-6), the Buckeyes host No.10 Louisville in a nationally televised game Sunday afternoon. Next week, Iowa and Michigan State come to town.

western game because it's a home game and it's in the conference," said Ayers. "I'm happy we're playing seven of our last 11 games at home. I just hope we make progress in those last 11."

After fast-breaking to a surprising 3-1 start in the Big Ten, the Buckeyes have found ways to lose. At Michigan and Minnesota, they stayed close until falling short in the final few seconds.

Last Thursday against Purdue, they shot 37 percent in the second half in losing for the first time this season at home. And Saturday at Illinois, they built a three-point lead at the half and then went scoreless the first nine minutes of the second half.

Ayers doesn't blame his team for the losses.

"We played four veteran clubs, three on the road, and an excellent team in Purdue at home," said the first-year Ohio State coach. "At some point, each of those teams' experience took over. I'm just concerned that our guys don't get down on themselves."

While Ohio State is at its low point, the same can't be said about Northwestern. The Wildcats, 7-3 during the preconference portion of the season, lost their first six conference games. But Saturday night, they held off Wisconsin, 87-85.

Northwestern's Rex Walters — with 50 points in his last two games — leads the Big Ten with an average of 22.3 points a game.

"He's playing extremely well right now," said Ayers. "And then you've got to be concerned about their front line, especially with (Walker) Lambiotte, who can have a big game against you. And they have another experienced player in (Brian) Schwabe."

Asked if there is one area that demands improvement for the Buckeyes to keep alive their faint postseason hopes, Ayers said, "In a close game we've got to concentrate on executing at the offensive end. Our young guys have to learn to play within themselves with the game on the line."

hockey teammates Byisma in areas others don't dare venture

You see, Bylsma finds it fun to kill penalties and skate into the corners with some of the bigger players in the nation.

"I like to get in the corners, work real hard and try to tire out the other team," Bylsma said. "In close games that is really a factor."

This is something BG's coaching staff saw in Bylsma when he was laboring for St. Mary's Lincolns of the Western Junior B League. It was here that he led the team with 69 points, 30 of them coming on goals.

"Coming to Bowling Green, coach recruited me as a hard nosed winger. We've had a history of this type of player — Matt's (Ruchty) one, (Marc) Potvin, Gino Cavallini and Ian Duncan," said Bylsma of the long line of big physical wingers that have played for BG coach Jerry York. "Coach likes to mix the strength and size with the speed."

It was this type of reputation that lured Bylsma from Western Michigan and Michigan when he was being recruited.

"Gino Cavallini gave me a call when I was being recruited to play at BG and I had seen him play in his two years here," the Grand Haven, Mich. native said. "When you're not that fast of a skater or you can't dangle like a Nelson Emerson you have to look at a person like Cavallini. You have to play with as much tenacity and heart as you can. Work hard in the corners and every shift get out there and take the body."

This was something Bylsma had been getting away from the last few weeks, but after seeing a cut in ice time, York has once again moved him up to the line he began the season with.

"For a few weeks Danny got away from the ingredients that make him a good player," York said. "He wasn't playing with the tenacity that makes him a good player, but he responded well last weekend and now he's back with the red line."

The red line — as it is called because of the color of their practice jerseys — is a combination of three players who each possess the determination to get the job done. Along with Bylsma is Jim Solly at center and Braden Shavchook at the other wing.

Although this line doesn't possess the high prolific scorer that the Emerson line and the (Brett) Harkins line does, it has been successful just the same having gone for a stretch earlier in the season which saw them score a goal in 12-of-17 games. This line also accounted for a point in 14 of those 17 games and in all, that line registered 34 points in those 17 contests.

"The red line had scored in 12 straight games," Bylsma

Illini may face charges

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Illinois basketball coach Lou Henson is standing by Jimmy Collins, his chief recruiter, who has been a key figure in allegations of irregularities in basketball recruiting at the school.

An NCAA investigation is believed to have ended Tuesday and Illinois is expecting a letter of official inquiry from the association later this week.

Illinois will have approximately 60 days to respond to any charges.

"I believe in Jimmy, I'm 100 percent supportive of him through this," Henson said Wednesday. "Anyone might inadvertently break a rule in recruiting, but it will be a surprise to me if a major rule was broken."

The NCAA has been checking into possible irregularities in the recruitment of 6-foot-9 forward Deon Thomas, a 1989 graduate of Chicago Simeon who had been one of the nations's top prep prospects.

Iowa assistant coach Bruce Pearl has given the NCAA a tape recording of a telephone conversation in which Thomas reportedly said he received $50,000 and a car for attending Illinois.

Thomas, a freshman, has been withheld from competition this season by the Fighting Illini pending completion of the probe.

In another development, Notre Dame's LaPhonso Ellis reportedly has told the NCAA that he was offered an automobile and an $85,000 package to attend Illinois. Ellis graduated in 1988 from East St. Louis, Ill., Lincoln after leading the school to successive Class AA Illinois High School championships.

Collins, barred from recruiting until the matter is settled, disputes the allegations.

"I've been a straightforward recruiter," he said. "I haven't done anything to violate the NCAA rules."

During a Big Ten coaches teleconference Tuesday, Collins said of the ordeal: "I'd be lying if I said it has been a vacation. It's been very tough because we've been instructed by the NCAA not to say anything."

"I think once people start learning what has happened and learn the truth of the situation — that's my reason for thinking it will work out," Collins said.

"I know and the NCAA knows Bruce Pearl has done some things," Collins said. "But I don't want to get (Iowa) in trouble anymore than the university wants to get us in trouble."

Pearl, who has said Iowa did not turn Illinois in for the recruitment of Thomas, says he taped the conversation with Thomas to protect himself because Iowa had been accused of illegal recruiting practices.

Briefly

TOLEDO — Bowling Green's Mary Beth Friel has been selected as the Mid-American Conference women's gymnast of the week.

Friel, a sophomore from Hoffman Estates, Ill., helped the Falcons to their first victory of the season on Saturday, 176.15-160.4 over non-conference foe Valparaiso.

Friel captured a pair of firsts and was runner-up in another event. She tied the school record with a winning 9.3 on the vault, was second on the floor exercise with a 9.05 and won the all-around competition with a score of 35.35.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chris James and the Cleveland Indians reached a contract agreement Wednesday that will pay James $560,000.

Incentive clauses will allow James to make an additional $12,500 if he reaches these levels: playing in 110 games, making 450 appearances at the plate, 125 games and 500 appearances at the plate.

James, one of eight Indians filing for arbitration, had been scheduled to have an arbitration hearing today in Chicago.

Bylsma

said. "This helps our team in that if another coach wants to put a checking line on Nelson, he may think twice knowing we are playing well. That is a key if we are going to play well against good teams."

Even when Bylsma was having a spell of bad luck, he was easy to spot on the ice. Just check out the next time the Falcons are playing short-handed and you are bound to see him taking a slap shot in some part of his body.

"I didn't play at all on special teams last year," the sophomore accounting major said. "I was determined this year to play on these occasions and if that meant getting down in front of slapshots, that's what I would do."

York also sees this has one of his big winger's assets.

"When we switched Danny to penalty killing role, he wasn't afraid to get down in front of shots from the point," York said.

But, blocking bullets from the point isn't the only hobby Bylsma enjoys.

He is also a prolific golfer who won the Michigan Class D state golf tournament as a freshman and was all-state in baseball as a senior.

But in the end it was hockey that he chose and York isn't the only one happy about that. The Winnipeg Jets of the National Hockey League saw enough good things in Bylsma to choose him in the sixth round of last year's draft.

But for right now, it's work, work, work.
